IMPORTANT NOTICE!

War Summary of The Latest Events

On the British front the day was comparatively quiet. The official report states that no change in the situation has taken place during the past twenty-four hours. At Ypres the British guns silenced German batteries that were shelling the city. Farther south enemy trenches west of Messines were bombarded. British flying squadrons met with considerable opposition in carrying out successful reconnaissances. Valuable information was acquired despite the large number of machines sent up by the Germans. Enemy billets and dumps were effectively bombed.

The advance on the Tigris has reached Lajj, nine miles southeast of Ctesiphon, and twenty-eight miles from Bagdad. On Monday afternoon the British cavalry engaged the rearguard of the retreating Turks. Eighty miles from Kut-el-Amara, the British will find strongest opposition at Ctesiphon where it is almost certain the Turks will assemble in force to bar the approaches to Bagdad.

The Russians have captured the Turkish positions on Asadabad summit, ten miles southwest of Hamadan, in Persia, according to an official despatch from Petrograd. The Turks are being pursued southward in the direction of Kangaver. On the Caucasian front, in the direction of Bidjar, the Russians have overtaken the flying Turks near Senne and an engagement is in progress. The increasing activity of the Russians in these regions will soon have an important bearing on the operations in Mesopotamia.

In the Verdun area the French guns shelled enemy detachments at Malincourt Wood, west of Hill 304. The German organizations at Eparges Wood also were bombarded. In the Champagne region, at Maison de Champagne, the German artillery was particularly active. On the Belgian front, east of Ramecapelle and north of Dixmude, the guns were active on both sides.

The Turks in Egypt have been forced to abandon a strong system of defences in the neighborhood of Schikh, west of Shellal. There is a place of this name on the Upper Nile, about four hundred miles south of Cairo. For two months the Turks were engaged in fortifying this position, which was bombed by British aircraft. Apparently the Turkish plans in this region were in an advanced stage of progress. The enemy fled on the approach of British troops.

WHAT IS WALLADERMA?

Walladerma is a winter balm—not a thick cream but a thin liquid that cures chapped hands and all roughness of the skin. Although we have 33 skin creams we unhesitatingly recommend Walladerma. Price 25c. the bottle—at WALLACE'S, Napanee's Drug Store.

For two months the Turks were engaged in fortifying this position, which was bombed by British aircraft. Apparently the Turkish plans in this region were in an advanced stage of progress. The enemy fled on the approach of British troops.

*****

The Italians scored a success in the Trentino Wednesday, when raiding parties penetrated the Austrian trenches on the Asiago plateau, at Mosciah. The Austrian trenches were wrecked and arms and ammunition were captured. In the Upper Cordevole the Italians counter-mined successfully, blowing up an enemy mine and occupying the crater. On the Carso, in the Boscomato sector, the Italian guns destroyed an important Austrian observation post. In the mountainous regions, where Austrian and Italian are fighting with all the bitterness of racial rivalry, the Austrians are no match for the agile Alpine troops opposed to them. Knowing their inferiority at this kind of warfare, the Austrians show no keen desire to attempt offensives against the Alpine regiments. Early in the war a battalion of Alpine troops climbed barefooted the precipitous heights of Monte Nero, and stormed and captured the enemy's stronghold before the astonished Austrians had recovered from their surprise. Austria has called to the colors the 1920 class—lads of sixteen and seventeen years.

*****

Submarine victims for the week ending March 4th numbered twenty-three British ships, according to an Admiralty statement issued Wednesday. Of the vessels sunk by submarine or mine the estimated loss is under thirty-five thousand tons, or an average of five thousand tons per day. Twelve armed vessels successfully fought off the enemy submarines. During the week about five thousand vessels of all nationalities arrived at or sailed from British ports. The law of diminishing returns appears to be operating against German frightfulness.

*****

The entry of China into the war is expected at Pekin. The Premier has returned to the capital, and it is understood has received the President's assent to carry out his policy with regard to the relations between China and Germany. The severing of diplomatic relations will, it is presumed, be the first step in the break with Germany.

LOOKING AFTER THE TOWN'S INTERESTS.

Very few of our citizens are aware of the fine stroke of business that has recently been accomplished in a quiet and unostentatious manner by Reeve Graham, of Napanee. The Ontario Government is completing arrange- ments for the construction of a pro- vincial highway through the rural Municipalities from one end of the province to the other. In looking into the details of this grand scheme our Reeve discovered that no provi- sion was made for aiding the towns and villages through which the pro- posed highway is to pass in the con- struction of the links included within the municipal bounds of these towns and villages. Upon his own initiative he prepared a resolution and brought it before the County Council request- ing the Legislature to include these towns and villages in their scheme. This resolution met with a favorable reception and was passed by the County Council. Similar action was taken by the town council at the in- stance of Mr. Graham and copies of these resolutions were sent to the different municipalities throughout the province through which the road will pass, with the suggestion that they also take action. Mr. Graham did not stop here but arranged for a de- legation to wait upon the Provincial Minister of Public Works and for that purpose an appointment was secured for last week. The Minister did not, as is customary, promise "to give the matter his best consideration" but thanked the delegation for the valu- able suggestion, which, up to that time had been overlooked and inside of twenty-four hours introduced an amendment to the original bill in the Legislature, covering the recommenda- tion of the delegation. To the Reeve of Napanee is due the honor of secur- ing for the towns through which this highway will pass, whatever benefits may be derived from the important piece of legislation. Mark does not advertise what he is doing, but gets there just the same.

KALADAR-DENBIGH HIGHWAY.

Addington Deputation is Assured of Help From Government.

Governmental assistance towards the construction of an automobile high- way from Kaladar to Denbigh in the county of Addington, was practically assured a large deputation headed by W. D. Black, M.P.P., and W. J. Paul, M.P., by Hon. F. G. Macdormid, Min- ister of Public Works, last week.

The deputation was thoroughly representative of the county affected and included in its personnel Mr. Bowerman, Mr. Graham, and Dr. Dwyer, of the Bon Echo Mines; Mr. Dore, representing the Ore Chim- ney Gold Mines and the Golden Pleece Mines; Messrs. Howard and Snell, of the Canadian Pacific Rail- way, and Mrs. Glasgow, who owns a Dwyer, of the Bon Echo Mines; Mr. Dores, representing the Ore Chim- ney Gold Mines and the Golden Fleece Mines; Messrs. Howard and Snell, of the Canadian Pacific Rail- way, and Mrs. Glasgow, who owns a private resort on the Mazineau wa- ters; C. G. McKnight, Warden of Frontenac; W. Kimmerly, Warden of Lennox and Addington, and W. W. Pringle, Colonization Road Inspector.

The length of the proposed road, it was pointed out, would be about forty-five miles, traversing one of the most picturesque sections of the province. All interests present ex- pressed their willingness to pay a substantial portion of the cost of construction, which they believed would be a benefit not only to the immediate neighborhood, which was now without road facilities, but would open up a large and deligh- tful tract of country. Mrs. Glasgow was perhaps the first woman appear- ing before the Minister on such a deputation, and her remarks were listened to with much interest and carried considerable weight. It was pointed out that the road could be built at a moderate cost, the pro- posed route winding around the Bald Mountains, through which a pass had been found. The highest grade at any point being one of 7 per cent. The route from Kaladar through the Bald Mountains has al- ready been surveyed and part of the line passes through the eastern for- est reserve.

Besides having a large agricultur- al area awaiting development, the district is a sportsman's paradise, and abounds in game and fish.

Hon. Mr. Macdormid confessed him- self impressed with the remarks of the deputation. He was gratified at the willingness of those interested to contribute towards the cost of the road, and so far as he could see at present there was no reason why the Government should not be will- ing to make a substantial grant and have the work proceeded with during the coming season.

Germans Were Compelled to Surrender Ground

Two Successful Operations Carried Out by General Men on Fronts of Two Miles—Tenton Resists. Been Growing Stronger Region.

LONDON, March 6.—In two days, despite a desperate attack by the Germans, Brit have made two big advances. Ancre valley, the first one 500 yards on a five-mile front, the second one of about 1,000 yards on a two-mile front east of court and north-east of Picourt.

Besides making the fore progress in the Ancre valley it attacked the German lines Bouchavesnes, north of the captured German front trenches on a front of three machine guns. In they repulsed several German attacks with great loss of enemy.

The continued progress British on the Somme, determined attempts of the stop them, is taken as a good sign for the opening of the spring. The roads will soon be dry and the fighting will be more intense. It is spread on a wide front south of the Somme and near Ancre.

British troops in the movement in the Ancre valley have made an advance east of Gommecourt a two-mile front of three-quarters of a mile, according to a report from here. Nearly 200 prisoners were taken. The text of the report read: "The enemy's front and support lines of Bouchavesnes on 1,200 yards, taking 173 prisoners and three machine guns. The day we repulsed several counter attacks of Gommecourt the enemy to yield ground. In this hood we advanced along a front to an average depth of 100 yards. Six prisoners were taken. Successful raid Saturday night east of Ablaincourt. During twenty-four hours we have a total of 190 prisoners, five machine guns, and two trench mortars."

Whatever may be the strategy lying behind or the German retirement Gommecourt and Le Trans made casual inspection of evacuated lines near Bapaume reveals the immediate threat of abandonment. They smashed to pieces by the ever increasing British fire. Communication trenches for the purpose of bringing in ammunition, have been almost beyond recognition long since ceased to serve purpose. The wide belt of the German lines has been bursting shells until it has become practically impassable. For a time, often for days, the of the British guns made

Original Home of Welshmen.

Jutland was probably the original home of our Kymric ancestors, as well as (at a later period) of some so called Saxon invaders. It was peopled in classical times by the Cimbr, identified by ethnologists with the Cymry, or modern Welshmen. The Germans magnanimously declined to annex Jutland with Schleswig-Holstein. It was then considered a worthless waste of moors, sand dunes and marshes. ## WILL STAY IN SALONIKA.

Bonar Law Makes Statement Concerning Balkan Campaign.

LONDON, March 6.—Colonel Winston Spencer Churchill, former First Lord of the Admiralty, said in the House of Commons Monday that from the moment Bulgaria entered the war and Germany obtained a through route to Constantinople it ought to have been obvious that the size of the armies needed at Salonika to achieve decisive results exceeded the carrying power at the disposal of Great Britain. He added that British honor was now involved, however, and the question was exceedingly complex.

Replying to Colonel Churchill and other critics of the Salonica expedition, including John Dillon, who asserted that Roumania had been forced into the war by Great Britain against her will and against the advice of General Sarrail, the French commander, and Russian Generals, Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, while refusing to reveal anything that Germany would like to know, intimated that the Government had no intention of withdrawing the troops from Salonica. He said that Great Britain could not act independently, and had to consult her allies. If the expedition were withdrawn Greece would be open, and the whole Balkan peninsula would be in the hands of the Entente's enemies.

With regard to the demands for a secret session of Parliament to discuss the matter, Mr. Bonar Law declared the Government could not frankly discuss the expedition even in a secret session. The Allies now had a common policy, the main object of which was to insure that if their enemies advanced against them the Entente powers should not run the risk they ran a few months ago of being attacked from behind. No threats, he asserted, were used to induce Roumania to enter the war.

PRESIDENT MAY ACT.

Wants to Arm Vessels Without Authority From Congress.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Further action by President Wilson in the German situation was postponed Monday pending a decision by his legal advisers whether he has power to arm American merchantmen in spite of the failure of Congress to pass a resolution conferring such authority.

The question was referred to Attorney-General Gregory and Secretary of State Lansing, and probably will be decided in time for consideration at Tuesday's Cabinet meeting—the first to be held in the new Administration. The inauguration ceremonies occupied most of their time Monday, but members of the Cabinet and other officials found opportunity to discuss the subject.

A determination to arm the merchantmen if a legal way to do so can be found was generally apparent.

The President has placed squarely before the Senate the responsibility for changing its rules during the special session begun Monday so that filibustering by a small group of Senators cannot prevent action by Congress. In the meantime he is preparing to take such steps as he can to meet the crisis and defend American rights.

While the arming of merchantmen is the step most considered it is

RUSSIANS ARE ACTIVE

Hamadan in Persia Recaptured From the Turks.

Town Was Evacuated Last August, but the Grand Duke Has Started a New Offensive and Will Co-operate With British in Their Advance Upon Bagdad.

PETROGRAD, March 6.—The capture of Hamadan, in Persia, slightly more than 100 miles from the Mesopotamian border, was officially announced by the War Office Sunday. The town was taken from the Turks on March 2. Russian troops also are on the offensive farther north-west, and have captured a village within two miles of Bijar, eighty miles north-west of Hamadan and about the same distance from the border. The official statement reads:

"Caucasus front: In Persia our detachments assumed the offensive in the direction of Bijar, and occupied the village of Khanikali, two miles south-west of Bijar.

"As the result of operations in the Hamadan region the town of Hamadan was captured by our troops on March 2."

The capture of Hamadan by the Russians may mean that the Czar's troops will again attempt an advance into Mesopotamia from Persia to aid the British in their advance up the Tigris toward Bagdad. Hamadan, which is 240 miles north-east of Bagdad, has been the centre of much fighting between the Russians and Turks. In April, 1915, it was occupied by the Turks, but on December 17, 1915, it was taken by the Russians, who continued their advance westward toward the frontier, later capturing Kermanshah and Khanikin, on the Persian border, 130 miles north-east of Bagdad.

Following the capture of Kut-el-Amara by the Turks in April, 1916, the Russians were forced to retreat from the Persian border, and were driven back through Kermanshah to Hamadan, which was evacuated early in August, 1916. Since then there has been much fighting, and the Turkish official statements late in December and early in January, said that the Russians had been repulsed in attacks near Hamadan. Hamadan has a population of 40,000.

The feature of the day was the good cash demand which was against a big break. The local pit crowd were bearish, but with premiums on the contract grades narrowing quickly, the features were partially supported. Oats were in fair demand at unchanged premiums.

CANADIANS IN ACTION.

Light Losses Reported in Battalions From Ontario.

OTTAWA, March 6.—Indications that the 3rd Canadian Division at the front has been in another fight are furnished by cables received at the Department of Militia. In the action on March 1st in which Lieut.-Colonel Beckett was killed there were losses affecting Ontario battalions, but they were not heavy. A number of officers besides Colonel Beckett are believed to have gone down, but the list will be forwarded through the usual channel of the Records Office.

Other cable despatches state that the casualties sustained, mostly on Thursday, are said to number about 200, and are considered comparatively light, especially if the entire division has been engaged. It is said that the 3rd Canadian Division has been following up the retreating Germans in the vicinity of Gommeourt. This is believed by some to be the action in which Lieut.-Colonel S. G. Beckett of Toronto was engaged, though it had not been supposed that his battalion was in the 3rd Division.

Denounce German Intrigues.

TOKIO, March 6.—An additional statement issued by the Japanese Foreign Office Saturday refers to frequent attempts of Germany to sow seeds of distrust between Japan and Great Britain and to cause the estrangement of Japan and the United States, and adds:

"The Government is confident that the peoples and Governments of the Entente will continue to have confidence in Japan's loyalty and its determination to extend all possible aid and share the difficulties and hardships until the struggle against Germany and German cruelties ends."

In its editorial comment The Japan Times alludes to the German conspiracy as "proof of a diseased mentality," but thinks it will serve a good purpose, because it will clarify in American minds many doubts and suspicions of Japan which, however unfounded, it says, they were unable altogether to free themselves from, owing to the continual poisoning.

Marriage is Annulled.

VANCOUVER, March 6.—Mr. Justice Murphy of the Supreme Court gave judgment Saturday declaring a nullity the marriage of Thomas M. Miller and Alice Geneva Allison in Washington. Miller, a British subject, was the petitioner, and the marriage was defended on the ground that Mrs. Allison had secured a divorce in Oregon from her former husband. Mr. Justice Murphy held that the Oregon law requiring a continuous residence of a year had not been complied with, as Mrs. Allison was then living with Miller in Victoria, B.C., as his wife, and paid only transient visits to Oregon. In British law, the petitioner being a British citizen, and a British matrimonial domicile being intended, the Washington marriage was invalid, his Honor declared.

To Make Supreme Effort.

PARIS, March 6.—Prof. Paul Painleve, Minister of Public Instruction, speaking Sunday at the Sorbonne on the question of when the war will end, said the decisive phase of the struggle would begin this spring. By decisive, however, he said he did not mean brief, and he predicted that Germany was preparing for a supreme effort.

"The nearer we approach the denouement," he declared, the harder will be the task."

The speaker warned civilians against impatience and nervousness, and declared their duty was to endure courageously the multiple difficulties caused them, to the end of the war. He asked his hearers to send this message to the soldiers at the front:—

"You may count on us to do our entire duty to the very end without flinching."

Supposed Spy Deported.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., March 6.—Vandyke, a supposed German spy, who was arrested here on suspicion because he had on a pair of Canadian Government boots, was sent back to the United States by the immigration authorities. The suspicion against the man was strengthened by the fact that he claimed he had been turned down at Hamilton when he tried to enlist there. He claimed he had varicose veins. When examined here he had no varicose veins. He could speak German, and answered when an immigration officer spoke to him in that language.

ATHLETES' HONOR ROLL

YOUNG CANADIANS KILLED IN FRANCE DURING 1916.

Names Recall Memorable Incidents on the Playing Fields of the Dominion in Recent Years When Men Starred in Games of Hockey, Rugby, and Lacrosse.

IN the past two years many comments have been made upon the splendid response of the athletes of Canada to the call of their country. Young men who had kept themselves physically fit felt that they were ready to go, and they went. That is perhaps the reason why most of the widely-known Canadians who fell during 1915 were men whose fame came to them on the playing fields, and all of them were exponents of our national games. Nick Carter, the great Vancouver lacrosse player; Art Muir, the Winnipeg Rugby star; Jeff Taylor, the Toronto oarsman; Alan Davidson, the Kingston hockey comet—all these men were known by name in every part of the Dominion. They gave up their lives early in the conflict. In 1916, the war took its toll of our athletes also, though probably there was no quartette on the honor roll of the year quite so well known as the men mentioned above. It also indicates the relation of national sports to the national life that practically all who were killed played our Canadian games.

It may be said without much fear of contradiction that the soldier who was the most outstanding star in his own particular pastime was A. M. Mackenzie, the Toronto Canoe Club paddler who fell at St. Eloi. Among the solo performers in canoes, there were few men in Canada who could contend against him, but paddling is a remote sort of contest, and people do not become familiar with the faces of those who excel at this form of racing. The name of Mackenzie was doubtless known to many persons who would have passed him on the street without recognizing him as the invincible speed artist.

The name of Gordon Southam of the Hamilton Tigers was one to conjure with in Rugby circles a few years ago. He died going into action with the 40th Battery of the Canadian Field Artillery, and his death carried the minds of people back to the days when gridiron fights were the most exciting warfare of each Canadian year. Gordon Southam made his reputation as a kicking and running half-back when he played on the University of Toronto team, but it was in 1907 that he made the most sensational play of his career in a game against the Montreal team on the M.A.A.A. grounds. The Big Four League had just been formed, which gave the teams an opportunity to settle an argument which had raged for many years as to whether the brand of Rugby played in Montreal and Ottawa was better than that played up around Hamilton and Toronto. Feeling was running very high that October day in Montreal, and at half-time the score stood 7 to 5 against the Tigers. Things looked rather gloomy for the Jungle Terrors, as their chief star, the reliable Ben Simpson, had been injured, and Southam showed signs of wearing down under the heavy treatment he a number of Toronto line-ups, and in 1914 the professionals wanted him in their ranks. He was a strong, fast, and willing defence fielder, and made a great lacrosse player because he would put up a fight all the way. He never consented to quit, and that characteristic stuck to him until the end. After receiving his mortal wound, he said to his comrades with the spirit that had pulled out many a game on the lacrosse fields of Ontario, "I know I am going to die, boys, but avenge my death."

A less aggressive but very effective lacrosse player was Johnny Rowland, who met his death in France on September 18th. Rowland came of one of the greatest lacrosse families produced in Toronto in recent years. He learned the game with the Maitlands on Cottingham Square, where all the Rowland brothers played. Cottingham Square is a name eloquent with meaning to all Ontario lacrosse players. It is a spot where the game has never been played with kid gloves. There was a time when no visiting team ever dreamed of winning on "the square"; the best they hoped to do was to "make a showing." Any lad who received his schooling there knew the science of the national game and also knew how to take his bumps. Rowland went over to the Tecumsehs to play on the defence field, and was with them when they won the championship of the N. L. U. in 1911. He accompanied the Indians to the coast to play against Vancouver for the Minto Cup, but the joy ride was fruitless. Any Tecumseh fan will tell you that Johnny Rowland was the best looking boy on the line-up that year. When leaving Canada with the 35th battalion, he remarked to one of his old lacrosse pals, "Yes, it will be a great game, but it won't take much more nerve than playing against Cornwall, or going up against the Nationals in Montreal." And he knew whereof he spoke.

Another lacrosse enthusiast who had more than a local reputation was Captain R. E. Horkins, a medical graduate of the University of Toronto. He was serving as a doctor at the front when killed. Dr. Horkins learned the game in Campbellford, where they have always known how to play lacrosse, and while studying in Toronto he had a place on one of the senior amateur teams of the city. In peace times, a Varsity team used to make a missionary journey once a year through the United States to demonstrate the Canadian national game. It has been taken up in a number of Uncle Sam's college centers, and their teams like to try conclusions occasionally with twelve boys from the Dominion. Dr. Horkins was captain of one of these Canadian teams. He was known as a clean, effective, and reliable player.

Hockey, the cold weather cousin of lacrosse, has also lost numerous exponents, the best known of them being Frank McGee, of Ottawa, one of the greatest hockey stars ever developed in Canada. He played with the celebrated Silver Seven that held the Stanley Cup for many years. Just at the beginning of the present century, hockey was in its prime, and McGee was one of the outstanding men of those glorious days. Historians of athletic events say that he twice saved the Stanley Cup for his team, the first time being in 1902, when the Winnipeg Rowing Club visited Ottawa in a vain effort to capture it, and again three years later

REBUKED THE DEAN.

The Theological Student Got His Revenge in a Few Words.

Thirty years ago Alexander Schmidt was dean of the university at Dorpat, in the Russian province of Livonia. "The Bloodsmith," as the students called him because of his researches concerning the circulation of the blood, was noted for the severity of his discipline. An amusing incident is told of him by an army chaplain in the Zeitung der 10. Armee:

A certain theological student once wanted to get leave from the university to attend his sister's wedding. The dean refused the necessary permission on the ground that the reason was too trivial. The student was greatly offended both because he wanted to go to the wedding and because he suspected that Dr. Schmidt had not believed that his excuse was a true one. Accordingly he was determined to get some kind of revenge.

It chanced that on the day after the affair he was reading St. Paul's second letter to Timothy when he suddenly saw a very clever way to get satisfaction. Laying down the Bible, he wrote to the Dorpat newspaper and ordered an advertisement inserted in large type that said simply, "II Tim. iv, 14-15a."

Every reader of the paper, surprised by that line, reached for his Bible and looked up the verses. Imagine the amusement of the university students when they found that the passage was, "Alexander, the coppersmith, did me much evil; the Lord reward him according to his works; of whom be thou ware also."

BURNING THE LEAVES.

A Foolish Waste of What Might Be a Valuable Fertilizer.

Many tons of valuable fertilizer are wasted every year through our practice of raking the fallen leaves from lawns and parks into the street and burning them. We destroy one of the best of nature's fertilizers, that on which she relies for the renewal of the vegetable humus in the soil.

All nature's protection is removed in the interest of tidiness. Then we wonder why lawns must be so frequently resodded and why grass seed "won't catch." The fallen leaves protect the roots of grass and shrubs from the freezing and thawing of winter and, deposited in a corner of the back yard with a little earth thrown over them to prevent their blowing away, in a year or two are converted into what the forester calls "duff," an organic material which makes the loam that grows the farmer's best crops.

It is an excellent top dressing for the lawn and enrichment for flowers and shrubs and, mixed with a little ordinary earth, a most desirable soil for filling the window boxes and repotting plants, something hard to get in town. It is invaluable to the amateur gardener who utilizes his back yard, and yet it is almost invariably wasted. We pay thousands of dollars every year for phosphates and nitrates and overlook this valuable product of nature's laboratory.—Detroit Free Press.

rons, as their chief star, the reliable Ben Simpson, who had been injured, and Southam showed signs of wearing down under the heavy treatment he was receiving. The Montreal team held the Tigers well out from their line, and all their tricks and bucking tactics could not break through. Then it was that Southam pulled a surprise that put a different complexion on the game. He kicked a beautiful goal from near centre field, and the Tigers were able to hold the advantage thus gained, winning one of the most exciting games in the history of Canadian Rugby.

Another old-timer among Rugby players who gave his life during the year was Peter Ferguson, who played in the scrimmage of the Ottawa Rough Riders about six years ago, when the team at the capital was at its strongest. "Pete" Ferguson was a big, good-natured Highlander, and made his home in Ottawa after fighting in the South African War. He took kindly to Canadian Rugby, and was with the Rough Riders from 1904 to 1911, years in which the game saw great development. He played in two Dominion finals, in both of which the Ottawa team went down to defeat. He was on the team that went down before "Varsity" in 1905, in the sensational game that Casey Baldwin, the aviator, has always been credited with winning by his individual brilliance. In 1911 the Rough Riders were defeated by "Varsity" a second time in a Dominion championship game, a struggle that revolutionized the method of play in our Rugby, being a triumph of new tactics over old. Pete Ferguson was playing when the "full back" became a thing of the past and the "flying wing" sprang into existence. It might also be added that he introduced a little wrinkle of his own in the way of a trick. It is said that he was the first man to try playing the position of quarter back so that he could make short kicks over the scrimmage and then use his weight and speed to secure the ball himself.

If anyone had asked who was the particular find of the Rugby season of 1914, the answer would have been "Colin Simpson of the Toronto Argonauts." He jumped into the game without any previous reputation, and became known in a couple of months as the tall, slight scrummager who was one of the most deadly tacklers in the game. He was always under the ball, and seldom missed his man. Lieut. Simpson was killed last July, and Sir Douglas Haig, in a despatch published since Christmas, mentioned this young Canadian for conspicuous bravery. Don Brophy, the Ottawa aviator who was killed while flying in England during the last week of December, had been regarded as a future Rugby star. He was attending McGill University in 1913 when that team won the intercollegiate championship, and he showed up so well that he made a place on the Ottawa back division a year later.

As lacrosse is the most typical of all Canadian games, it is only natural that the Honor Roll should contain many names of men who have starred with the gutted stick. It is sufficiently eloquent to say that sixty per cent. of the men who played lacrosse in Ontario in 1915 were in khaki in 1916. One of the most widely known of lacrosse players to lay down his life was Pte. Arthur Long, son of the Rev. J. A. Long, of Weston. He was killed by a shell explosion during a bombardment on March 29th last. Art. Long played with the Weston team and later on team, the first time being in 1902, when the Winnipeg Rowing Club visited Ottawa in a vain effort to capture it, and again three years later when Kenora was the challenging team. McGee lost the sight of one eye through an accident in a hockey match, and it was fear of an injury to the other eye that made him give up the game in which he had few peers. He has never been surpassed among the athletes of the Dominion for gameness and brilliant cleverness.—Toronto Saturday Night.

Ring Took Long Trip.

A valuable diamond ring, which has made a journey from Toronto to the front in a soldier's Christmas parcel, is now on its way back to its owner. The ring, which belongs to Mrs. R. H. Mitchell, Toronto, was lost last November, while she and other ladies of Bloor Street Presbyterian Church were preparing Christmas gifts for shipment to members of the congregation at the front. It was not missed until after the boxes had been sent away, and, when search failed to discover it, the suggestion was made that it might have gone with them. Meanwhile, Mrs. A. F. Webster had written to her son, Lieut. Harold Webster, of the 33rd Battery, R.C.H.A., who was in France. The latter has just written that, returning from his duty in a forward observing station to the battery, he found the parcel addressed to him, examined it and found the missing ring. He sent it to England by a brother officer, who mailed it to its owner.

Nature's Monument to Washington.

Among the many monuments to Washington is the one which every visitor to the Cape Verde islands will remember as one of the most colossal and marvelous freaks of natural sculpture in existence. Along the farther side of the harbor of San Vicente, the principal town, rises a bold ridge of dark gray volcanic rocks, the crest of which forms an exact likeness of our immortal George, seemingly lying face upward, as if in a peaceful sleep. The hero's large, bold features, the backward wave of the hair, his massive shoulders and even the frill of the shirt front are all reproduced on a gigantic scale with wonderful exactness. The strange monument, sharply outlined against the deep blue of the tropical sky, is one of the first objects that meet one's eye in approaching the island.

Venus and Jupiter.

The "earth's twin sister," Venus, is 67,000,000 miles from the sun. It receives more heat than we do. Very little is known of Venus, and so few markings are seen that it is not known whether Venus rotates on its axis once in twenty-four hours or once in 225 days.

Jupiter, the giant of the sun's family, is covered with a shell of clouds which change so rapidly that conditions there can be interpreted only in one way—that Jupiter is so large and it has cooled so slowly that it is still far too hot to support life.

Value of Knowledge.

Knowledge is like the coin of exchange. A man is justified, to a degree, in taking pride in its possession if he himself worked over the gold of it and tried to coin it or, at least, if he came by it honestly, already tested out. But when he did not do anything of the kind, but just got it from some passerby who threw it into his face, then what ground has he to boast of it?—John Ruskin.

QUEER HUMAN NATURE.

How the Significance of Words May Change With the Years.

How the same word may have a different significance for the same man at different stages of his life is given in the following from the New York Post, as adapted and expanded from the French in the Paris Figaro:

Life.—At twenty: Days that are coming. At fifty: Days that are going.

The Heart.—At twenty: An organ whose frequent palpitations are due to strong emotion. At fifty: An organ whose frequent palpitations are due to indigestion.

The Truth.—At twenty: Something to be flaunted in the face of the whole world. At fifty: Something it is not always politic to tell.

Poetry.—At twenty: Something you read with eagerness and enthusiasm. At fifty: Something to quote.

Time.—At twenty: You imagine you never have enough of it. Therefore are always in a hurry. At fifty: You know you never have enough of it. Therefore never hurry.

A Muffler.—At twenty: A protection for one's dress shirt. At fifty: A protection for what is under one's dress shirt.

The Hair.—At twenty: You shake it back off your forehead. At fifty: Comb it carefully down across your forehead.

Key.—At twenty: A contrivance used to open things with. At fifty: A con-

GUIDE YOUR BOY NOW.

Keep Him on the Road That Leads to the Highest Citizenship.

This is a good time to think of your boy. If you do not look after him in the right way some one will do it in the wrong way. Begin now.

Teach your boy to follow in the foot- steps of his father, to respect the law, to obey his parents, to regard the rights of all men, to honor virtue, to respect womanhood and to depend upon no one but himself for his ad- vancement.

Teach him that the Golden Rule of life will be found in the Ten Com- mandments. They are short. They have survived the ages. They stand today unchanged and unchallenged.

They comprise the first great written law given by God to man. Before these few commandments all man made laws fade into insignificance. Teach them to your boy. There is dan- ger ahead if you do not.

The universal drift of mankind is to- ward decadence. Heredity pays its premium and also exacts its discount. The son of a good father and an affec- tionate mother, brought up in an at- mosphere of parental regard, never will disgrace the family.

The boys of today are to be the men of tomorrow. The destinies of the American people are to be in the hands of their sons. If the boys are taught respect for the law (both human and divine), obedience to authority, manly independence and the fear of God this great nation will be a noble monument to man's capacity for self government and self control at a time when all the world is a seething cauldron of unrest, unreason and disbelief.

Teach your boy to rule, but first to rule himself.—John A. Sletcher in Les- lie's Weekly.

OUR ECONOMIC HOUSE.

It May Be Rebuilt, as a Railway Sta- tion Is, While In Use.

Sometimes, when I think of the growth of our economic system, it seems to me as if, leaving our law just about where it was before any of the modern inventions or developments took place, we had simply at baphaz- ard extended the family residence, added an office here and a workroom there and a new set of sleeping rooms there, built up higher on our foundations and put out little lean-tos on the side until we had a structure that had no char- acter whatever. Now the problem is to live in the house and yet change it.

Well, we are architects in our time, and our architects are also engineers. We don't have to stop using a railroad terminal because a new station is be- ing built. We don't have to stop any of the processes of our lives because we are rearranging the structures in which we conduct those processes.

What we have to undertake is to sys- tematize the foundations of the house, then to thread all the old parts of the structure with the steel which will be laced together in modern fashion, ac- commodated to all the modern knowl- edge of structural strength and elas- ticity, and then slowly change the par- titions, relay the walls, let in the light through new apertures, improve the ventilation, until finally, a generation or two from now, the scaffolding will be taken away and there will be the Stopped Most Terrible Suf- fering by Getting Her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegeta- ble Compound.

Denison, Texas. — "After my little girl was born two years ago I began suffering with female trouble and could hardly do my work. I was very nervous but just kept drag- ging on until last summer when I got where I could not do my work. I would have a chill every day and hot flashes and dizzy spells and my head would almost burst. I got where I was almost a walking skeleton and life was a burden to me until one day my husband's step- sister told my husband if he did not do something for me I would not last long and told him to get your medicine. So he got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Com- pound for me, and after taking the first three doses I began to improve. I con- tinued its use, and I have never had any female trouble since. I feel that I owe my life to you and your remedies. They did for me what doctors could not do and I will always praise it wherever I go."—Mrs. G. O. LOWERY, 419 W. Mon- terey Street, Denison, Texas.

If you are suffering from any form of female ills, get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and commence the treatment without delay.

SCOTS AS FIGHTERS.

They Won Fame In Former Days Un- der Many Different Flags.

It would be difficult to find an army in Europe which did not contain de- scendants of the Scottish soldier of fortune. In Sweden Gustavus Adol- phus had four lieutenant generals, twenty-two colonels and many other inferior officers, all Scotsmen, in his service. He owned that his conquests in Germany were due to the valor of these gallant soldiers.

In Muscovy the Bruces, the Gordons and the Douglasses were famous.

Even in Germany the ubiquitous Scot was to be found, and a General Ogilvy, whose grandfather was a Scotsman, was at one time field marshal of the empire.

It was in France, however, that the Scot was rated most highly, and an old saying ran, "Fidele comme un coscais." Louis had such a respect for these soldiers that he ordained that his body should be guarded night and day by twenty-four Scotsmen. The Scots bodyguard was continued through the reign of nine kings without mission for 150 years.

King Charles VII. raised another com- pany of Scots, called "Gens d'armes d'Escoisse," consisting of 100 horse and 200 archers. This force had pre- cedence of all the French troops.— London Chronicle.

Wouldn't Need It.

Ethel was going to a party at a neighbor's house where she had already caught tantalizing glimpses of unlimited quantities of cake, fruit and ices. At the last mother inconsiderately held her back for final instructions.

"Now, remember, darling, to say 'Yes, please,' and 'No, thank you.'"

"Oh, yes, mother," Ethel said. "I shall always say 'Yes, please,' but I don't think I shall have to say 'No, thank you.'"

Woman.

A woman may be a fool—a sleepy fool, an agitated fool, a too awfully noxious fool—and she may even be simply stupid. But she is never dense. She's never made of wood through and through, as some men are. There is in woman, always somewhere, a spring. Whatever men don't know about women (and it may be a lot or it may be very little), men and even fathers do know that much. And that is why so many men are afraid of them.—Conrad.

What Nothing Is.

If any man thinks that he can conceive well enough how there should be nothing, I will engage that what he means by nothing is as much something as anything that he ever thought of in his life, and I believe that if he knew what nothing was it would be intuitively evident to him that it could not be. Absolute nothing is the aggregate of all the contradictions in the world.—Jonathan Edwards.

STEVENSON IN HIS YOUTH.

And a Satirical Forecast That Became a Reality.

I do not think that in these early days Stevenson appeared to any of us as specifically a genius, an exceptional man set apart for great accomplishments. Indeed, had we been solemnly assured that he would share the honor, with only one or two possible competitors, of being the foremost English writer of the latter half of the nineteenth century we would certainly have received the assurance with a smile. What! Louis! So simple, kindly, natural; so all round a good fellow; so like all the rest of us, only nicer!

And I am quite sure that in his inmost heart at this period he could never really have looked forward to or expected the fame which later came to him and which grows and expands as time gives us the perspective wherewith to view it in all its roundness and bigness and essential simplicity. In fact, in introducing himself to me he remarked simply that he was "a writer chap" or hoped to be one.

I was told of a rainy afternoon "blague party," at which I did not chance to be present, during which Bob Stevenson amused himself by forecasting the future careers of those present. When he came to his cousin he remarked with a satirical little smile: "There sits Louis, as smug and complacent as any old type de bourgeois. I have not the least doubt that he fondly imagines that one of these days they will be publishing all of his dinky private correspondence—the letters of R. L. S.—in boards."

And Louis joined as heartily as any one in the laugh which the sally raised. Bob, at least, did live to see the publication of the "Vallima Letters," and I have often wondered if he remembered this little incident as he thumbed their leaves.—Birge Harrison in Century.

Squid Ink Bag.

Ancient ink was made by a squeezing out of dead cuttlefish after the body was perfectly relaxed. Painters got their sepia from this same squid's bottle. This likewise is the true source of the genuine and original india ink, for which there has never been any satisfactory substitute found.

The ink bag of the cuttlefish is as big as a man's thumb and can squirt six feet, darkening more than a hoghead of water, so the squid can make unseen a dart and dash and get away when squid eating sea fish come round.

HEADS OF ODD SHAPE.

The Kilon, Lafton and Maqbon as Described in the Talmud.

It is a matter familiar to every student of the Bible that the Hebrew priests were required to be physically as well as morally perfect—without a bodily defect or blemish—in order to be eligible to service in the temple. The Talmud, in the tractate Bechoroth, says a writer in the Medical Record, enumerates several defects which disqualify a priest from ministering in his holy office. Among these are the kilon, the lafton and the maqbon.

The condition of kilon is ascribed as a person having a peculiarly shaped head, which is pointed at the top and broad at the bottom. The lafton was a man with a head shaped exactly the opposite of the preceding. To use the expression of the Talmud, he had a head very broad at the top and narrow at the bottom, like a lefe—I. e., a pumpkin.

The expression maqbon, derived from the word hammer, refers to a hammer shaped head or, as the Talmud describes it, one with a prominent and projecting forehead and occiput.

The terse descriptions of the kilon head and lafton head given by the Talmud could not be improved on by any modern textbook in medicine.

Osman Pasha's Daring.

One of the most gallant generals that ever surrendered to the enemy was Osman Pasha, the immortal defender of Plevna. Surrounded by an immeasurably superior army of Russia, Osman kept his flag flying for 142 days, inflicting a loss of 40,000 men on the enemy and losing 30,000 of his own garrison. It was only when both provisions and ammunition failed that he decided on that desperate attempt to cut his way through the investing army. The attempt, one of the most daring and resolute in history, failed, and Osman was at last compelled to admit defeat. So impressed, however, were the enemy with his valor that as he was carried wounded through their ranks they greeted him as a conqueror with cheers and presented arms.

The Plumb Line In Porto Rico.

There are places where the direction of a plumb line is not vertical. Irregularities of density in the crust of the globe may produce this phenomenon. A remarkable instance in point was found in the island of Porto Rico, where the deviation from the vertical is so great that in mapping the island the northern and southern coast lines, as shown in the older maps, had each to be moved inward half a mile.—Scientific American.

Raisins as Food.

As a producer of energy the raisin is a marvel. One pound of raisins in this respect, according to a doctor, will more than equal "a pound of beef or five pounds of fish, two pounds of eggs, four pounds of potatoes, two quarts of milk, half a peck of apples or a dozen bananas." And the advantage of the sugar in the raisin is that it is almost immediately digested, assimilated and transformed into energy.

FIFTIETH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

On Tuesday evening, February 20th, the congregation of the Methodist Church, Selby, accompanied by a few most intimate friends and neighbors, assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ira B. Hudgins, to do them honor, it being the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day. Although the event was a real surprise, and the house filled with young and older people, the bride and groom of fifty years maintained that composure that has characterized them all through life and greeted each one in such a gracious spirit, that it caused all to rejoice that such an occasion was offered them.

Seated comfortably, side by side, in their cosy chairs, their faces beaming with the joy that comes from a realization, that they were the possessors of the respect and good will of the entire community, they were unconscious of the fact that they were again playing the leading role in a company, and were just as attractive as on that day fifty years ago, when he was in his twenties and she was in her teens.

The chairman of the evening, Rev. E. B. Cooke, delivered a most appropriate address. His remarks were based on the influence of such lives in the community, and stated that the religious, social and moral life of the community was the better because of the inspiration given it by Mr. and Mrs. Hudgins. On behalf of the friends, he presented them with a pretty little box in which were tucked away two gold coins, emblematic of the fact that it was a golden wedding anniversary, and a golden opportunity to bestow honor where honor was due.

In reply, Mr. Hudgins gave a short summary of their wedded life. He thanked the friends for the honor they had conferred upon them. He concluded by saying they deemed themselves unworthy of all that had been said and done; however, no person agreed with him in regard to this statement.

Several near relatives, who were privileged to attend the wedding, were present, and were called upon to give reminiscences of the event.

Mrs. Madole, a little girl in her uncle's home, remembered and told of things, which at that time, she was kept from knowing lest little tongues could not keep secrets.

Mrs. Schermohorn gave a description of the wedding gown. Mrs. Abbott's recollections were of the bride's introduction into the groom's family, Mr. D. R. Sexsmith and Mr. M. P. Hudgins were lads at the time, and have still vivid memories of the good things to eat.

Putting all these facts together, the imagination carried the audience back to February 20th, 1867, when the home of Mr. and Mrs. John O. Sexsmith was the scene of a very pretty wedding, their daughter, Esther Ann, being united in wedlock to Ira B. Hudgins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ezekial Hudgins, Richmond.

The toast of the evening, "The Bride and Groom," was proposed by Mr. Fred Sexsmith. He spoke in eulogistic terms of both as neighbors and benefactors, and of Mr. Hudgins as a man with whom it was a pleasure to sit in business circles. Mr. Jas. Wilson, son-in-law, responded to the toast. He thought from what had been said a prophet had some honor in his own

Effective Danger Sign.
 A contractor who has observed that pedestrians pay little attention to signs has evolved a new plan to guard against accidents to "innocent bystanders." A steam shovel working many feet below the surface of the street attracts scores of persons daily. They stop, lean over the board railing around the excavation and stare. Sometimes the crowd gets so large that there is danger of the railing giving way and plunging them into the excavation. "Danger" signs don't worry them; hence the new idea of the contractor. He has smeared the top of the railing with tar and grease. Now persons who never shudder at the "danger" sign flee from the grease menace as if it were poison.—Philadelphia North American.

Mr. Jas. Wilson, son-in-law, responded to the toast. He thought from what had been said a prophet had some honor in his own community.
 Various other speakers added to the evening's entertainment, Mr. I. S. Jackson, Mr. Manly Jones, Mr. M. S. Madole, and all paid high tribute to the worth and worthiness of the couple whom they were delighted to honor on this occasion.
 Musical selections were rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Cooke, Miss Maisie Madole and Miss Beulah Hudgins. "Blest be the Tie That Binds," "Auld Lang Syne," "Put on Your Old Grey Bonnet," gave every one a chance to have some part in the happy celebration.
 Refreshments were served by the ladies. "God Save the King" was sung, and the party dispersed, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Hudgins many more years of wedded happiness.

The Ford is Economical

THE average man can easily afford a Ford car. It is the most inexpensive car to drive.

20 to 25 miles on a gallon of gasoline is an every-day occurrence. 33 miles is frequently reported by Ford owners. Yearly repair expenses of less than one dollar are not unusual. The car is light in weight, and tires give more mileage on a Ford than on any other car.

You can buy a Ford for yourself and one for your wife for the price of one car at $1000. You can run both Fords at about the same expense as for one larger, heavier car.

You can always sell a "used" Ford at a good price. You have to accept a big reduction for a "used" larger car.

Go and take a ride in the 1917 model. See how comfortable it is. And stylish, too—stream line effect, tapered hood, crown fenders, beautiful finish. You need one for business. Your wife and children need one for pleasure and health.

To the Editor of The Express:—

Sir,—I have already shown that the contract which the Hydro-Electric Commission ask consumers to sign, is a violation of the Seymour Power agreement and unreasonably deprives those who sign it of their rights and all means of redress against injustice, no matter how flagrant. Probably I have gone as far as necessary in presenting this aspect of the case, But merely as a "matter of record", as the Chief Engineer puts it, I may be allowed to present a few additional comments. I don't wish any one to get the impression that I have overlooked these.

The Commission asks the consumer to assign to them exclusive rights for lighting his premises. Monopolies whether by law or otherwise, have been denounced as the one unforgivable outrage upon a free people. Yet here it is adopted as a "safe guard"—a power of repression rather—by the people's Commission against the people individually. It has a sinister look, especially in connection with the clause making the Commission sole arbiter of disputes.

The consumer is further asked to expressly authorize the Commission to remove its meter, cut off the supply of electricity and cancel the agreement whenever any bills are in arrears (the last day allowed for discount), or upon violation by the consumer of any of the terms and conditions of this agreement. There are scores of these conditions of which the consumer has no knowledge, and which we doubt if any one in the town, outside Commission employees, has ever seen. For myself I have just obtained a copy of the "Rules and Regulations," but have not had time to look them over. As if this blanket power to cut off service was not sufficiently despotic, the consumer is further asked to agree that on request of the Commission, he will make a deposit to be held by the Commission as a guarantee that the consumer will fulfill all the terms of this agreement. It will be remembered that the contract further covers additions or changes the Commission may make, and as a final bar to any assertion of consumer's rights the Commission is made sole and final arbiter of all disputes.

It would be interesting to know in what school the Commission staff learned the art of making cast iron contracts. I venture the assertion that no corporation has ever taught the same proficiency as our own Commission.

It is an old axiom that a contract should be fair to both parties. Put here we have a contract in which each succeeding provision binds the consumer tighter and harder and then filches from the already helpless victim the right heretofore regarded as inalienable to every free man, the right of appeal to common justice. Where shall we find a parallel? In no free country on earth—in Germany only.

Contrast the above with the simple provisions of the Seymour contract in this behalf. The Com-

Through the "U. E. Loyalist" Chapter, I.O.D.E.

The Chapter and Committee received last week a very kind donation of $6.00 from Miss Madelon Deroche, of Denver, Colorado, through her uncle, W. P. Deroche, Esq., and we desire herewith to express to Miss Deroche our sincere appreciation of the gift.

Two splendid cases of hospital supplies of all sorts, including surgical dressings in bulk, as well as comforts for the patients, have been shipped this week, for the little hospitals of Brittany, where all these supplies are still so much in demand. A case of supplies for the Belgians is being packed, and anyone having anything to add to the same is asked to bring or send it to the work room by Saturday.

Remember our room is open every Thursday and Saturday afternoons until 5.30, and those who desire to work quietly, without the confusion of many coming and going are advised to patronize the work-room on Saturday especially, but are glad to welcome all our friends at any time.

Naming the Gerry-mander.

The gerry-mander was christened in 1813, although it must have been in operation long before that. A staunch Federalist, Governor Elbridge Gerry, controlled through his legislature the redistricting of Massachusetts under the census of 1810. In the office of Benjamin Russell, an ardent Republican editor, hung a map of the state as newly subdivided by Gerry and his men. Gilbert Stuart's ready pencil whimsically added to the outlines of a grotesque district the wings and tail of a dragon.

"Ha!" he said when he had finished "How's that for a salamander?"

The Republican Russell growled "Better call it a gerry-mander." And American politicians have taken his advice.

Barley Water.

Sometimes the doctor orders barley or oatmeal water for baby. When such is the case prepare as follows:

Add two tablespoonfuls of washed pearl barley or of oatmeal, as the case may be, to a quart of cold water. Boil this down to a pint, cooking slowly for about two hours. Then strain while hot and add a sufficient quantity of cold boiled water to make a quart of the fluid. Keep cool in a covered jar.

Fanny Crosby's Memory.

The blind hymn writer, Fanny Crosby, who immortalized herself with "Safe In the Arms of Jesus," was capable of the most amazing exhibitions of "inability to forget."

Insect Luminescence.

Luminescence is normal in the well known luminous beetles, including the various fireflies and glowworms, and results naturally from the oxidation of some organic secretion. Other insects are luminous in rare instances. Rev. J. Holroyde, vicar of Patcham, England, lately noted luminous moth larvae, similar to those observed once or twice previously, and the chironomous—a kind of gnat—and the "lantern beetles" of South America are among the creatures sometimes lighted up. The occasional luminescence has been attributed to disease or decomposition from bacterial infection.

A Domestic Interlude.

Marriageable Daughter—I think, father, you do Arthur a great injustice when you say that he is penurious.

Precocious Brother—What's penurious, father?

Father—Why, penurious means close.

Precocious Brother—Then you're right. That young man is awful penurious when he comes to see Sis.—Exchange.

Contrast the above with the simple provisions of the Seymour contract in this behalf. The Company may charge domestic users 10c. per kilowatt hour, with a discount of 10 per cent. for payment of bills within ten days—really a fine of ten per cent. for dilatory payment, but no forcible entry and no arbitrary removal of meters or cutting off service for supposed violation of conditions of which the consumer knows nothing. The Company can further require from any person in arrears a deposit of $5.00, a guarantee of payment, which amount must be returned at the end of 12 months if all accounts are duly paid.

Which is the "square deal"?

I have made a partial review of the contract itself. I think it would be well worth my time, your space, and the readers' attention to review the documents which are expressly made a part of this contract but this is really another chapter and I shall reserve it for a future letter.

Perhaps some of those who have given this series their attention are expecting that I shall deal with the new schedule of rates. I intend doing so, but I consider it better that I should first lay bare as much as possible of the Hydro organization that we may understand not only their powers but our own position. It seems to me the proposition is sufficiently important that all should take ample time and all the data available for its consideration.

Yours, etc.,

Council Chambers,
Napanee, March 5th, 1917.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening.

In the absence of Mayor Denison, through illness, Reeve Graham occupied the chair.

Members present—Councillors Robinson, Gibbard, Steacy, Lowry, Hunter and Spencer.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read, and on motion were confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From F. S. Spence, Secretary of the Ontario Municipal Association, saying there ought to be some Commission to regulate insurance rates, as some cities and towns had spent large sums of money on fire equipment, thereby reducing fire risks, which should receive consideration, and asked the Council to pass a resolution regarding same. Ordered filed.

From J. E. Madden, Barrister, saying that Mrs. Leah Russell was again complaining about the water flooding her cellar, and informing the Council that the town would be held responsible for any damages arising from same. Referred to the Streets Committee.

A petition was received from John Fennell, Sr., and J. A. Parks, asking for a light on Church street similar to the lights on the Newburgh Road. Referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee to report.

REPORTS.

Councillor Robinson, Chairman of the Finance Committee, reported that the taxes were not coming in at all, and there were over $1,400.00 uncollected at the present date.

On motion the Finance Committee was instructed to put pressure upon the Collector of Taxes to have the roll returned.

Reeve Graham, Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, reported as follows:—(1). That the accounts of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission and T. B. Wallace were found to be correct, and, as the Committee was given power to act, the accounts have been paid. (2). The Committee recommended that no action be taken on the petition of the Napanee Fire Brigade for an increase in salary, as the town already has heavy obligations to meet at the present time. (3). The Committee recommended that the request of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission for leave to construct a 44,000 volt transmission line through the corporation, as per plan filed with the Clerk, be granted, on the understanding that the Commission do take full responsibility and do keep and save the corporation harmless from any claim whatsoever for damages by reason of the transmission lines being so constructed. On motion the report was adopted.

Councillor Steacy, Chairman of the Market and Police Committee, reported that the Committee recommended that the alterations to the Police Magistrate's offices be left over until later in the season. On motion the report was adopted.

a Provincial Highway from Windsor to Montreal. Replying to the delegation the Ministers thanked them for this assurance and they were satisfied that their road policy would meet with the approval of the Province generally.

While in Toronto we also took up the question of the construction of the Provincial Highway inside the town limits, as set forth in the resolution that was adopted by this Council and the County Council.

On Wednesday morning we called on Mr. McLean, the Deputy Minister of Highways, and had a thorough discussion of the question with him, setting forth our arguments and reasons for asking the Government to take over and construct the proposed highway inside the town limits. He appeared to be favorably impressed with the necessity of the Government taking some action in the matter and advised us to take the question up with the Minister, Mr. Macdormid. This we did on Thursday morning, and we waited on the Minister, accompanied by the members of the County Council, and Mr. W. A. Grange, Town Clerk. Mr. Grange placed the matter before the Minister in a very able manner, and after some general discussion we were informed that the Department would take the matter under consideration, and we were assured that some steps would be taken to assist the town in the construction of its part of the Highway. Since then we see by reports in the press that the Minister has introduced a measure that gives the Department power to build, or assist in building the proposed highway through villages and small towns. As Napanee has practically two miles of this road inside the limits and about a mile is road that fronts on farm lands, we feel sure that the citizens will appreciate the value of this announcement as it effects our own town.

The thanks of this Council and the citizens generally is due to the members of the County Council, who so kindly assisted us in placing this matter before the Minister and impressing upon him the necessity for some action being taken to assist the town in the construction of its part of the highway.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

On motion the report was adopted.

On motion the Finance Committee were instructed to take up with the County Council the matter of placing the office of Police Magistrate on a salary basis.

Reeve Graham presented the report of the delegates to the Good Roads Convention, as follows:—

Napanee, March 5th, 1917.

To the Mayor and Council, Town of Napanee.

Gentlemen,—We, your delegates to the Good Roads Convention held in Toronto on February 28th, and March 1st, beg leave to report as follows:—

We attended the meeting of the Convention and heard several good instructive addresses by men who have had wide experience in the different classes of road building. We also heard a good deal of general discussion from the different delegates on the best methods of road construction to meet conditions of traffic as they exist at the present time. We were able to gather considerable information that we feel we will be able to use to help improve road conditions in the town.

A good deal of time was taken up with discussion of the proposed building of a Provincial Highway. The Hon. Findlay G. Macdormid, Minister of Public Works, made an address to the convention and outlined the Government's plans in respect to the building of a Provincial Highway from Windsor to Montreal. From his remarks we believe it is the intention of the Government to take over this road this year, to proceed with the repairing or building of those parts of the road that are in the poorest state of repair, and possibly to establish at an early date a patrol system that will keep the road up in as good a condition as possible until such time as the actual building of the road as a complete highway can be undertaken. We were also informed by the Minister that it was not the intention of the Department to undertake the work of constructing the Highway in its entirety until after the war is over, or until such time as conditions will warrant the commencement of the work. It is the intention of the Government to provide work for returned soldiers in this way. On Thursday morning the delegates went in a body to the Parliament Buildings, and several speakers from different parts of the Province assured Sir William Hearst and his Cabinet that the Good Roads Association of Ontario approved of the Government's plans for the taking over and building of with authority to take the matter up with our Town Solicitor and Mr. T. B. German, Executor of the Wright estate, and if necessary to obtain an opinion of the Court, and in case it is decided that we have authority to turn this money over to the County for the purpose of assisting in the building of a House of Refuge, that this Council places itself on record as being agreeable to and in favor of such action being taken when required to do so. Carried.

Reeve Graham informed the Council that the Quinte Glass Company of Deseronto, were desirous of coming to Napanee if they could secure suitable quarters. This company would employ about forty hands, their business being that of cutting glass.

On motion the matter was referred to the Finance Committee to interview the Quinte Glass Company, and report at next meeting.

On motion Reeve Graham was appointed Mayor ex-officio during the illness of Mayor Denison.

On motion the sympathy of the Council was extended to Mayor Denison and the hope for his speedy recovery.

discriminating persons the best the session was the clash the two hard-boiled Egos—Sir Sam's and Sir Thomas's. It has been conceded that Sir Sam just exactly hate himself, but Finance Minister adores himself session tenderer still.

Sam's ego was under some. He was explaining why the active party loved him so much kicked him down stairs. More was explaining under difficult William Mackenzie had been during the week, and had reus detonators. Likewise the agent was not disposed to let too far without taking a back. Altogether Mars was raps, but his Ego pranced to the same.

Sir Sam got up to speak, ten faithful souls broke into. When he sat down he got out from his side of the. Everybody seemed relieved, Sir Sam, that nothing had been it could back-fire. Sam made plain that he wouldn't join eral party because its principl repugnant to him, and also, it, because, as he was a Lib-ay years ago before he was a ative, he couldn't very well again. As Winston Churchill 'You can rat once, but you erat, don't you know.'

also made it plain that he ant to leave the dear old ative party so long as there hance of him becoming a cab-ister again. Sir Sam is under nt that there is to be a shake ch will shake Premier Borden l that then is his chance. If thrown down then he can go form a Third Party and be-erier along that route. ed for it that way. What a crack Tom gave Sam with that shovel, and after Sam being so kind and considerate of the Conservative party, too! Another sly dig was Sir Thomas' statement that Sir Sam had once thought so much of him as to offer to make him an honorary colonel. Sir Thomas refused and naturally he welcomed a chance to tell the public that he refused and thereby to acquire merit with sensible people. Even when Sir Thomas is "paying them out" he doesn't forget that he has his way to make. Excelsior—that is his motto. And if he can do it by making a fool of Sam, why so much the better!

But taking a whack at Sam was the least part of Sir Thomas' speech. What he was out to prove was that Sir Thomas White was the David Lloyd George of this Canadian situation and that Premier Borden was the Asquith, so to speak. If Sir Thomas hadn't this in view why did he quote at length the letters which he kept writing to Premier Borden, from the beginning of the war right up-to-date—letters all of which showed Premier Borden holding back, and Finance Minister White prodding him on to take the overseas situation in hand and get some check on the expenditure, which totalled some eighty million dollars a year. That was the quarrel—responsibility for the expenditure, not worrying over who should be brigadier and who not.

Sir Thomas' letter revealed Premier Borden as the monkey on the stick, and Tom White as the fellow that made him jump. Which was just what Tom set out to prove. C. E. D. as our old friend Euclid used to say.

In the course of an hour's speech Sir Thomas must have paused once a minute to hurl a bouquet at himself. Not mentioning names, of course, but looking straight at the party concerned. Carefully avoiding the first person singular, but leaving it to the common sense of the House to understand that only one man could be meant. "Lack of leadership," Sir Thomas would exclaim, and then go on to tell all the plain and fancy borrowing this country had done and the trade it had built up. You had only one guess as to who was responsible for all these wonderful things. The Finance Minister disclaimed all praise, but he intimated that history was hanging just around the corner to hand him his wreath when he came that way.

All of which bears out the opening statement of this article—that the hard-boiled Ego simply must advertise.

Late that evening he had a reply from his Paris managers. They inquired if he was responsible for the message they had received. It was a ticklish job, and they wanted to be sure the message was genuine. He wired back that he was the sender and to go ahead. The next morning they notified him that his instructions would be carried out as expeditiously as possible.

About 11 o'clock the next day an incomprehensibly long message began to rattle out of the air. He contained himself in patience, for the matter of half an hour or so longer, and then, as the clatter continued without cessation, he got up and made his way to the door of the operator's office.

"What is it? The history of England?" he demanded sarcastically.

"Message for you, Mr. Blithers. It's a long one, and I had a hard time picking it up."

There were four sheets of writing at some outlandish price per word, but what cared he? His eyes almost started from his head as he took in the name at the bottom of the message. It was "Maud."

He took the precaution to read it before handing it over to his wife, to whom it was addressed in conjunction with himself. It was from Paris and ran thus:

Dear Father and Mother—In reply to your esteemed favor of the 15th, or possibly the 20th, I beg to inform you that I arrived safely in Paris as per schedule. Regarding the voyage, it was delightful. We had one or two rough days. The rest of the time it was perfectly heavenly. I met two or three interesting and amusing people on board, and they made the time pass most agreeably. I think I wired you that I had a glimpse of a certain person. On my arrival in Paris I was met at the station by friends and taken at once to the small, exclusive hotel where they are stopping for the summer. It is so small and exclusive that I'm sure you have never heard of it. I may as well tell you that I have seen Channie—you know who I mean—Chandler Scoville, and he has been very nice to me. Concerning your suggestion that I reconsider the statement issued to the press, I beg to state that I don't see any sense in taking the world into my confidence any farther than it has been taken already, if that is grammatically correct. I have also sent word to a certain person that he is not to pay any attention to the report that we are likely to change our minds in order to take

The sharp visaged little minister of police came up to the table and fixed an accusing eye upon his sovereign—the literal truth, for he had the other eye closed in a protracted wink.

"I regret to inform your majesty that the enemy is upon us," he said. "I fear that our retreat is cut off. Nothing remains save—"

"Where is she?" demanded Robin, unimpressed by this glowing panegyric.

"At this instant, sir, I fancy she is rallying her forces in the very face of a helpless mirror. In other words, she is preparing for the fray. She is dressing."

"When did she arrive?"

"She came last night via Milan."

"From Milan?" cried Robin, astonished.

"A roundabout way, I'll admit," said the baron, dryly, "and tortuous in these hot days, but admirably suited to a purpose. I should say that she was bent on throwing some one off the track."

"And yet she came!" cried the prince, in exultation. "She wanted to come, after all, now didn't she, Dank?" He gave the lieutenant a look of triumph.

"She is more dangerous than I thought," said the guardsman mournfully.

"Sit down, baron," commanded the prince. "I want to lay down the law to all of you. You three will have to move on to Graustark and leave me to look out for myself. I will not have Miss Guille!"

"No!" exclaimed the baron, with unusual vehemence. "I expected you to propose something of the kind, and I am obliged to confess to you that we have discussed the contingency in advance. We will not leave you. That is final. You may depose us, ex-

"Your mind has gone horseback riding, I fear. At present it is between here and Lauterbrunnen, jogging beside that roaring little torrent that—" "I don't mind confessing that you are quite right," he said frankly.

"You are in love."

"I am," he confessed.

She laid her hand upon his. Her eyes were wide with eagerness. "Would it drive away the blues if I were to tell you that you have a chance to win her?"

He felt his head spinning. "If—I could believe that—that—" he began and choked up with the rush of emotion that swept through him.

"She is a strange girl. She will marry for love alone. Her father is determined that she shall marry a royal prince. That much I may confess to you. She has defied her father, Mr. Schmidt. She will marry for love, and I believe it is in your power to awaken love in that adorable heart of hers. You!"

"For God's sake, Mrs. Gaston, tell me—tell me, has she breathed a word to you that?"

"Not a single word. But I know her well. I have known her since she was a baby, and I can read the soul that looks out through those lovely eyes."

"But you—you don't know anything about me. I may be the veriest adventurer. I must be honest with you, Mrs. Gaston," he said suddenly. "I am not!"

She held up her hand. "Mr. Totten has informed me that you are a lifelong friend of Mrs. Truxton King. I cabled to her from Paris. There is no more to be said."

His face fell. "Did she tell you—everything?"

"She said no more than that R. Schmidt is the finest boy in all the world." Suddenly her face paled. "You are never—never to breathe a word of this—to Bedelia," she whispered.

"But her father? What will he say to?"

"Her father has said all that can be said," she broke in quietly. "He cannot force her to marry the man he has selected. She will marry the man she loves."

"Thank you, thank you, Mrs. Gaston," he cried, with shining eyes. "God bless you!"

Night came and with it the silvery glow of moonlight across the hoary headed queen of the Oberland. When Robin came out from dinner he seated himself on the porch, expectant, eager—and vastly lonesome.

She came at last—and alone. Stopping at the rail not more than an arm's length from where he sat, she gazed pensively up at the solemn mistress of the valley, one slim hand at her bosom, the other hanging limp at her side. He was in thrall. "Bedelia!" he whispered softly.

She turned quickly, to find him standing beside her, his face aglow with rapture. A quick catch of the breath, a sudden movement of the hand that lay upon her breast and then she smiled—a wavering, uncertain smile that went straight to his heart and shamed him for startling her. "I beg your pardon," he began lamely. "I—I startled you."

She held out her hand to him, still smiling, "I fear I shall never become

I have also sent word to a certain person that he is not to pay any attention to the report that we are likely to change our minds in order to help out the greedy newspapers who don't appear to know when they have had enough. I hope that the voyage will benefit both of you as much as it did me. If I felt any better than I do now I'd call for the police as a precaution. Let me suggest that you try the chicken à la bombardier in the Ritz restaurant. I found it delicious. I daresay they serve it as nicely on your ship as they do on the Jupiter, as the management is the same. Of course one never can tell about chefs. My plans are a trifle indefinite. I may leave here at any moment. If I should happen to be away from Paris when you arrive don't worry about me. I shall be all right and in safe hands. I will let you know where I am just as soon as I get settled somewhere. I must go where it is quiet and peaceful. I am so distressed over what has occurred that I don't feel as though I could ever be seen in public again without a thick veil and a pair of goggles. I have plenty of money for immediate use, but you might deposit something to my credit at the Credit Lyonnais, as I haven't the least idea how long I shall stay over here. Miranda is well and is taking good care of me. She seldom lets me out of her sight if that is any comfort to you. I hope you will forgive the brevity of this communication and believe me when I say that it is not lack of love for you both that curtails its length, but the abominably hot weather. With endless love from your devoted daughter, MAUD.

It was nearly bedtime before word came from his managers in Paris. Bedtime had no meaning for him after he had worked out the message by the code. It is true that he observed a life long custom and went to bed, but he did not do it for the purpose of going to sleep.

"Your daughter has disappeared from Paris. All efforts to locate her have failed. Friends say she left ostensibly for the Pyrenees, but inquiries at stations and along line fail to reveal trace of her. Scoville still here and apparently in the dark. He is being watched. Her companion and maid left with her last night. Prince of Graustark and party left for Edelweiss today."

So read the message from Paris.

CHAPTER XVI.

A Word of Encouragement.

ONE usually has breakfast on the porch of the Hotel Schweizerhof at Interlaken. It is not the most fashionable hostelry in the quaint little town at the head of the lake of Thun, but it is of an excellent character, and the rolls and honey to be had with one's breakfast cannot be surpassed in the Bernese Oberland.

R. Schmidt sat facing the dejected Boske Dank. His eyes were dancing with the joy of living.

"Well, here we are, and, in spite of that, where are we?" said Dank, who saw nothing beautiful in the smile of any early morn. "I mean to say, what have we to show for our pains? We sneak into this God forsaken hamlet, surrounded on all sides by abominations in the shape of tourists, and at the end of twenty-four hours we discover that the fair Miss Guile has played us a shabby trick. I daresay she is laughing herself sick over the whole business."

"Which is more than you can say for yourself, Boske," said Robin blithely. "Brace up! All is not lost. We'll wait here a day or two longer and then—"

"Hello, who is this approaching? It is no other than the great Gourou himself, the king of sleuths, as they say in the books I used to read. Good morning, baron."

Gavacho

"Where is she?" demanded Robin.

ile us, curse us or anything you like, but still we shall remain true to the duty we owe to our country. We stay here, Prince Robin, just so long as you are content to remain."

Robin's face was very red. "You shame me, baron," he said simply.

"Now, I have a suggestion of my own to offer," said the baron, taking a seat at the end of the table. "I confess that Miss Guile may not be favorably impressed by the constant attendance of three able-bodied nurses, and, as she happens to be no fool, it is reasonably certain that she will grasp the significance of our assiduity. Now I propose that the count, Dank and myself efface ourselves as completely as possible during the rest of our enforced stay in Interlaken. I propose that we take quarters in another hotel and leave you and Hobbs to the tender mercies of the enemy. It seems to me that—"

"Good!" cried Robin. "That's the ticket! I quite agree to that, baron."

Ten o'clock found the three gentlemen—so classified by Hobbs—out of the Schweizerhof and arranging for accommodations at the Regina Hotel Jungfraublick.

He was somewhat puzzled by the strange submissiveness of his companions. Deep down in his mind lurked the disquieting suspicion that they were conniving to get the better of the lovely temptress by some sly and secret bit of strategy. What had become of their anxiety, their eagerness to drag him off to Graustark by the first train?

Enlightenment came unexpectedly and with a shock to his composure. Two people emerged from the door and, passing by without so much as a glance in his direction, made their way to the mounting block. Robin's heart went down to his boots. Bedelia, a graceful figure in a smart riding habit, was laughing blithely over a soft spoken remark that her companion had made as they were crossing the porch. And that companion was no other than the tall, good looking fellow who had met her at Cherbourg! The prince, stunned and incredulous, watched them mount their horses and canter away, followed by a groom who seemed to have sprung up from nowhere.

"Good morning, Mr. Schmidt," spoke a voice, and, still bewildered, he whirled, hat in hand, to confront Mrs. Gaston. "Did I startle you?"

He bowed stiffly over the hand she held out for him to clasp and murmured something about being proof against any surprise.

"Isn't it a glorious morning? And how wonderful she is in this gorgeous sunlight," went on Mrs. Gaston, in what may be described as a hurried, nervous manner.

"I had the briefest glimpse of her," mumbled Robin. "When did she come?"

"Centuries and centuries ago, Mr. Schmidt," said she, with a smile. "I was speaking of the Jungfrau."

"Oh!" he exclaimed, flushing. "I thought you—er—yes, of course! Really quite wonderful."

her. "I beg your pardon," he began lamely. "I—I startled you."

She held out her hand to him, still smiling, "I fear I shall never become accustomed to being pursued," she said, striving for command of her voice. "It is dreadful to feel that some one is forever watching you from behind. I am glad it is you, however. You at least are not 'the secret eye that never sleeps!'" She gently withdrew her hand from his ardent clasp. "Mrs. Gaston told me that she had seen you. I feared that you might have gone on your way rejoicing."

"Rejoicing?" he cried. "Why do you say that?"

"After our experience in Paris I should think that you had had enough of me and my faithful watchdogs."

"Then you are being followed?"

She smiled again, and there was mischief in her eye. "If so I have led them a merry chase. We have been traveling for two days and nights, Mr. Schmidt, by train and motor, getting off at stations unexpectedly, hopping into trains going in any direction but the right one, sleeping in strange beds and doing all manner of queer things."

"I see that your retinue has been substantially augmented," he remarked, a trace of jealousy in his voice. "The good looking Mr. White has not been eluded."

"Mr. White? Oh, yes, I see. But he is to be trusted, Mr. Schmidt," she said mysteriously—and tantalizingly. "He will not betray me to my cruel monster of a father."

"I saw you this morning riding with him," said he glumly.

She turned her face away and for a moment was silent. "Shall we take those chairs over there, Mr. Schmidt? They appear to be as abandoned as we." She indicated two chairs near the broad portals.

He shook his head. "If we are looking for the most utterly abandoned allow me to call your attention to the two in yonder corner."

"It is quite dark over there," she said with a frown.

"Quite," he agreed. "Which accounts, no doubt, for your failure to see them."

"Mrs. Gaston will be looking for me before"—she began hesitatingly.

"Or Mr. White, perhaps. Let me remind you that they have exceedingly sharp eyes."

"Mr. White is no longer here," she announced.

His heart leaped. "Then I, at least, have nothing to fear," he said quickly.

She ignored the banality. "He left this afternoon. Very well, let us take the seats over there. I rather like the—shall I say shadows?"

"Now, tell me everything," he said. "From beginning to end. What became of you after that day at St. Cloud, whither have you journeyed, and wherefore were you so bent on coming to this now blessed Interlaken?"

"Easily answered. Nothing at all became of me. I journey thither, and I came because I had set my heart on seeing the Jungfrau."

"But you had seen it many times."

"And I hoped that I might find peace and quiet here," she added quite distinctly.

"You love no one else?" he cried rapturously.

She swayed slightly, as if incapable of resisting the appeal that called her to his heart, and she scarcely breathed the words:

"I love no one else."

A less noble nature than this would have seized upon the advantage offered by her sudden weakness. Instead, he drew a long, deep breath, straightened his figure, and he gently released the imprisoned hand.

She spoke softly. "It is too soon for us to judge each other. I must be sure—oh, I must be sure of myself. Can you understand? Now, I must go in. No; do not ask me to stay—and let me go alone. I prefer it so. Good night, my comrade."

He stood up and let her pass. "Good night, my princess," he said, clearly and distinctly. She shot a swift glance into his eyes, smiled faintly and moved away.

Two days went by, but there was not a word of love passed between these two who waited for the fruit to ripen. They were never alone together. Always they were attended by the calm, keen eyed Mrs. Gaston.

On the third day he was convicted of duplicity. She went off for a walk alone. When she came in after an absence of at least two hours the girl went up to her room without so much as a word with him. Her face was flushed and she carried her head disdainfully. He was greatly puzzled.

The puzzle was soon explained. He waited for her on the stairway as she came down alone to dinner.

"You told me that your friends were not in Interlaken, Mr. Schmidt," she said coldly. "Why did you feel called upon to deceive me?"

He bit his lip. For an instant he reflected, and then gave an evasive answer. "I think I told you that I was alone in this hotel, Miss Guile. My friends are at another hotel. I am not aware that"— "I was morally certain that they were here. Today my suspicions were justified. I encountered Mr. Totten in the park beyond the Jungfraublick. He was very much upset, I can assure you, but he recovered with amazing swiftness. We sat on one of the benches in a nice little nook and had a long, long talk. He is a charming man. I have asked him to come to luncheon with us tomorrow and to bring Mr. Dank."

"Good Lord, will wonders never"—

She laid her hand gently upon his arm and a serious sweetness came into her eyes.

"Come," she said, "let us go in ahead of Mrs. Gaston. Let us have just one little minute to ourselves, Mr. Schmidt."

When Mrs. Gaston joined Robin and Bedelia at the table, which had been set for them in the salle a manger, she laid several letters before the girl, who picked them up instantly and glanced at the superscription on each.

"You will forgive me, Mr. Schmidt," she said nervously. "I must look at without comment. One looking over her shoulder as she read, however, might have caught snatches of sentences here and there on the heavily scrawled page. They were such as these: "You had led me to hope;" "for years I have been your faithful admirer." "Nor have I wavered for an instant despite your whimsical attitude;" "therefore I felt justified in believing that you were sincere in your determination to defy your father." And others of an even more caustic nature: "You are going to marry this prince, after all," "Your father will be pleased to find that you are obedient." "If I were a prince with a crown and a debt that I couldn't pay;" "admit that I have had no real chance to win out against such odds," etc.

She faced Robin coolly. "It will be necessary to abandon our little luncheon for tomorrow. I am sorry. Still Mr. Totten informs me that he will be in Vienna shortly. The pleasure is merely postponed."

"Are you in earnest about this trip by motor tomorrow morning?" demanded Robin darkly. "You surely Maud's aggravating behavior would be stating the case with excessive gentleness. He was furious. He sent for the head of the detective agency and gave him a blowing up that he was never to forget. It appears that the detectives had followed a false lead and had been fooled by the wary Maud in a most humiliating manner. They hadn't the remotest notion where she was and evinced great surprise when informed in a voice loud enough to be heard a half block away that she was on her way to Graustark.

Then he dragged Mrs. Blithers off to the Gare de l'Est and took the express to Vienna. He would see to the loan first and to Maud afterward.

Going back a day or two, it becomes necessary to report that while in Vienna the perverse Bedelia played a shabby trick on the infatuated Robin. She stole away from the Bristol in the middle of the night and was halfway to the Graustark frontier before he was aware of her flight. She left a note for him in which she said:

Recruits Wanted for Production

Just as surely as lack of food is strangling Germany day by day, so plenty of food is winning the victory for the allies. The French armies of France were never better fed than now, for France cannot forget the awful lesson of 1870—the failure of her food supply. To this she attributed the loss of that war.

To feed the French soldiers around Verdun, more than 25,000,000 pounds of food a week were required. This gives a faint idea of the colossal task of feeding an army. Canada and Britain have a huge army of fighting horses on the line; every man must have plenty of food, in spite of a world shortage. Upon Canada's food production all principally rely.

SMOKING MEATS ON THE FARM

Proper Methods Aid In Preservation as Well as In Palatability.

(Prepared by United States department of agriculture.)

Proper smoking will not only aid in the preservation of pickled and cured meats, but also will add to their palatability. The preservative effect in smoking is due to the formation of creosote by the combustion of wood, this substance closing the pores of the meat to some extent, thereby excluding the air and also forming a coating objectionable to insects.

The most important dimension of the smokehouse is its height. This should be eight or ten feet to insure best results. The horizontal dimensions should be determined by the amount of meat likely to be smoked, 6 by 8 feet being large enough for ordinary farm use. Ample ventilation should be provided to carry off the warm air in order to prevent overheating the meat. Small openings under the eaves or a chimney in the roof will be sufficient if arranged so as to be easily controlled. A fire pot outside of the house proper, with a flue through which the smoke may be conducted to the meat chamber, gives the best conditions for smoking. When this cannot be arranged a fire may be built on the floor of the house, and the meat shielded by a sheet of metal. Where the meat can be hung six or seven feet above the fire, this precaution need not be taken. The construction should be such as to allow the smoke to pass up freely over the meat and out of the house, though rapid circulation is at the expense of fuel.

Brick or stone houses are the best, though the first cost is greater than if they are built of lumber. Large dry goods boxes and even barrels may be made to serve as smokehouses where only small amounts of meat are to be smoked. The care of meat in such substitutes is so much more difficult and the results so much less satisfactory that a permanent place should be provided if possible.

The best fuel for smoking meats is green hickory or maple wood smothered with sawdust of the same material. Hard wood of any kind is preferable to soft wood. Resinous woods should never be used, as they are likely to impart bad flavors to the product. Corncobs are the best substitute for hard wood and may be used if desired. Soft wood and corncobs give off large amounts of carbon in burning, and this is deposited on the meat, making it dark in color and rank flavored. Juniper berries and fragrant woods are sometimes added to the fire to flavor the meat.

Meat that is to be smoked should be removed from the brine two or three days before being put in the smokehouse. If it has been cured in a strong brine it will be best to soak the pieces in cold water overnight to prevent a crust of salt from forming on the outside when drained. Washing the meat in tepid water and scrubbing clean with a brush is a good practice. The pieces should then be hung up to drain for a day or two. When drained they may be hung in the house. All should be suspended below the ventilators and should hang so that no two pieces come in contact, as this would prevent uniform smoking.

PEACH BUDS WINTER

Those on Young Trees More Injured.

The fact that the peach is perfectly hardy in this climate is a question of winter killing. One in the mind of the Hardiness of bud, as we term it, depends upon several factors receiving greatest consideration. It is that consider in the selection of for the orchard. The susceptibility to winter killing varies somewhat, however, to the age of the tree. As a rule it will be found that the young trees are more apt to than those on more mature.

In Ohio winter hardiness mean so much resistance to temperatures as it does resistance

STAGNANT WATER.

Perhaps you have seen a farmer turn his stock into a field with no available water except a stagnant pond. Beef cattle may drink this water and suffer no apparent injury, but cases have been known in which numerous typhoid germs have been found in milk of dairy cows who drank the water of such places. In fact, outbreaks of typhoid fever have been traced to this source. Stagnant water is very undesirable for sheep, as it is frequently a source of stomach worms. Unless continuously supplied with fresh water it is much more profitable for the farmer to drain the pond or keep his stock from gaining access to it.—Farm Progress.

HOW LARGE A FARM?

There are Several Important Factors to Be Considered.

"What size should the farm be to secure the best returns?" This question is often asked, but one might just as well ask the size of an ear of corn or an Irish potato. The kind of farming, the capital available and the ability of the man who manages it are all important factors which challenge the answer.

The first point to be clearly set forth is what is meant by the farm, explains a writer in the Progressive Farmer. In some cases 1,000 acres are regarded as a farm, when as a matter of fact there are twenty to forty distinct units, each really twenty to forty small farms, which are generally accepted as making up one large farm.

If the question refers to the farm unit and not to the number of these that may be grouped under one management then the answer depends on the kind of farming, the available capital, the planning the farming operation and the ability of the farmer, but it refers to the number of farm units, or the number of families which can be looked after by one man then the size is only limited by the activities and ability of the manager.

If the acreage or the farm unit be too small the expense per acre for the implements and machinery necessary to do economical and efficient work will be too great, and yet without this equipment the operator of the farm cannot obtain the best financial results. For instance, a man with forty acres, on which only five to ten acres of small grains are grown, cannot afford to own a binder, and yet there is no question but the binder is necessary to the most economical harvesting of these crops.

This same principle applies as to all equipment of larger cost and limited use. For a small acreage one cannot afford high priced implements that can only be used for a few days out of each year, no matter how efficient these implements may be in accomplishing work.

more than 300 acres, or possibly of more than 500 acres at the most, is generally too large for the best results. The reasons are that there is too much for one manager to look after well if a good type of farming is done, and the distance from the central point or from the farm buildings or from the most distant parts of the farm is so great that much time is lost in going to and from work and in hauling crops or products.

Convenient to Handle Milk.

Milk and cream from even a few cows can be much more conveniently handled in regular milk cans than in the shallow pans and wide mouth buckets commonly used. The larger vessel is a convenient can for collecting the milk at the barn and transferring it to the house.

These cans may be bought in various sizes. For handling cream and sterilized milk where separators are used or even where cream is set to sour for buttermaking the 2-gallon can is very convenient. It can be easily stored and set in water and is convenient to handle.

Cutworm Poison.

If cutworms prove troublesome in the garden or cornfield they can be head in the neck with a solution of five parts of kerosene and a part of lime cream or lead arsenate and a quart of tobacco. The lead arsenate is now sold in tins from the post office, and which can be used should be dissolved in two quarts of water, to which the kerosene and ground part of two lemons or oranges should be added.

This poison mixture should be scattered in the garden in order that it may stay moist as long as possible, as the worms refuse to eat it after it has become dry. The addition of the orange or lemon juice is important in making it attractive to the worms, but it is likely to be attractive to the chickens and some other farm animals also with fatal results.

Coconut Cream Candy.

One coconut, one and one-half pounds granulated sugar. Put sugar and milk of coconut together, heat slowly until sugar is melted; then boil five minutes, and coconut finely grated, boil ten minutes longer, stir constantly to keep from burning. Pour on buttered plates, cut in squares. Will take about two days to harden. Try preparation when other cannot be had.

For Sick Cattle.

Paraffin melted and mixed with vasoline and soles of silk stockings makes the threads slippery and allows their wearing away.

for a day or two, when it may be hung in the house. All should be suspended below the ventilators and should hang so that no two pieces come in contact, as this would prevent uniform smoking.

A slow fire may then be started, warming up the meat gradually. During the winter months in cold climates it is best to keep the fire going continually until the smoking is complete, holding the temperature at about the same point. If the fire is allowed to die down the meat becomes cold and the smoke does not penetrate readily. This results in heavy smoke on the outside and very little on the inner portions of the meat. During the spring months and in the summer a light fire may be started every second or third day for two weeks, the meat being allowed to hang in the smokehouse until sufficiently colored. When the fire is kept going steadily and an even temperature is maintained, twenty-four to thirty-six hours will be required to finish one lot of meat. Smoke will not penetrate frozen meat, and it will be necessary to extract all frost from it before filling the house. The house should be kept dark at all times to prevent flies entering. As soon as smoked sufficiently the meat should be cooled by opening the ventilators or doors. When hard and firm it may be cut up or packed away for summer use.

Silo Anchors.

These anchors are used to secure wooden stave silos to a concrete base. Five forms are shown in each of which the arms are at an angle of sixty degrees to each other. They are bolted to each stave and are fastened to large bolts imbedded in the concrete base.—Agricultural Digest.

ON SHEEP FEEDING.

C. G. Starr, an authority on sheep feeding and who buys and feeds several thousand lambs each year, gives the following advice as a result of his long experience:

To be a successful feeder requires more use of brains than any other line of agriculture.

The successful feeder must be on the watch for things to happen in the pens. Care in being punctual with breakfast for lambs will do wonders.

No one ever made sheep fat by stinting them.

Lambs really do best in dry lots when the feeding begins too late to use green blades of corn and grass. They have a disposition to wander and will not stay with the feed unless more or less closely confined.

Enough troughs should be provided for grain feeding so that all can get all the grain they desire.

The water should always be fresh and clean. Have plenty of it in enough troughs so that sheep can easily drink.

Plenty of corn is always needed. Cottonseed meal is very useful, especially when silage is used. A pound of silage per head per day is about enough.

effects of the "January thaws" which starts the buds into life or them at the mercy of the brutally cold snap. That it behave differently under variations we have reason to fear.

The Fitzgerald is a case. This peach originated in bears a reputation there for hardness. Here while hard conspicuously so. The day that the Canadian winter is tinned steady cold, varied weather, but without the hitherto produced by the win Ohio. Here it is not unusual have a week in late January February in which the temperature several consecutive days reaches 60 degrees F. during midday.

Thus it would seem that the hardness of varieties that continuously cold might be different from that for a winter.

Storing Sweet Potatoes.

When first placed in the house sweet potatoes should be kept by the use of temperature of from 80 to 90 F. This curing temperature maintained for from ten to twelve weeks and should then be reduced to about 55 degrees at as near this point as possible the ventilators should be closed during the day in clear weather and kept closed during the night in damp or rainy weather. temperature in the house should be 50 degrees F. the house should be shot if the outside temperature or a fire should be started to maintain the temperature to the desired point once the potatoes have been thoroughly chilled their quality and they are more susceptible. In order to maintain the temperatures farmers should use rate thermometers in the houses.

The pilgrims had nothing to do with the naming of New England. That name was coined by Captain John Smith of Pocahontas fame and one of the founders of the Virginia colony. In 1614 he explored and mapped the northern coast, then called North Vir- ginia, and renamed it New England. The Mayflower pilgrims did not arrive until 1620, and the charter granted the new colony adopted the name used in Smith's map several years before.

range of light. When might came he selected the lee side of a log, made a fire and went to sleep on a bed of pine needles. If it was snowing he made a bigger fire and lay closer to his log shelter.

"Outdoors is the natural place for man," he said. "I begin to cough and wheeze the minute I get within walls."

Never at a loss to make his way in the wilderness, he was completely be- wildered in the midst of city streets.

"What is the nearest way out of town?" he asked of a man in the busi- ness section of San Francisco soon af- ter he landed at the Golden Gate in 1868.

"But I don't know where you want to go!" protested the surprised pedes- trian.

"To any place that is wild," he re- plied.—Mary R. Parkman in St. Nich- olas.

EASY CHEMICAL FEATS.

How to Fireproof Cloth and to Make Sympathetic Ink.

"Sympathetic ink," popularly consid- ered a "first aid" to war spies in writ- ing invisible communications, and fireproof cloth" offer two interesting chemical experiments the formulas for which have been supplied by a con- tributor to the Electrical Experimenter. They follow:

Sympathetic Ink.—With a clean steel pen write on white paper with a cobalt chloride solution and let dry. When the paper is held near a fire the writ- ing will gradually appear and disap- pear again when it cools because the chloride absorbs moisture from the air. Even though the paper is scorched, the writing will still be visible.

Fireproofing Cloth.—First get two glass tumblers. Add two teaspoonfuls of ammonium chloride to the water in one glass and stir until dissolved. In the other glass put a piece of cot- ton cloth two or three inches square and then pour the dissolved ammonium chloride into the glass containing the cloth and see that it is well soaked with the solution. Hang the cloth up and let it dry. Then touch it with a lighted match. It will burn in the flame, but will go out as soon as the flame is removed.

Serving His Country.

A certain public office has been the object of much satire because of the passive nature, as a rule, of the in- cumbent's duties. In this connection the following extract from Moses Coit Tyler's journal, written in Washington years ago, is interesting:

"President Grant never starts a con- versation, but when it is started he often says a neat thing. Last year there was an excursion down the Po- tomac. He was on board, with his cabi- net and a quorum of both houses.

"Mr. President," said Mrs. Judd, who sat near him, "it would be a pretty bad thing to have a great accident hap- pen to this party. Nearly the whole government would be destroyed."

"Yes, Mrs. Judd," assented the pre- sident, "but you observe that the vice president has very prudently stayed at home."

SHILOH

Carelessness with the food supply is regarded as the greatest source of waste in British homes. "It is the waste, not that which is legitimately consumed in our homes, which adds to the burden of the present high cost of living."

Here are some samples of the "war economy" hints to the manager of the kitchen:

Nine women out of every ten throw away the water in which potatoes have been cooked. The tenth cuts a slice of bacon into small pieces, fries it and in the fat cooks a tablespoonful of minced onion, mixes a tablespoonful of flour with a little water, seasons to taste, adds it all to the potato stock—and she has a savory soup.

A tempting little hot dish for supper may be made from several kinds of vegetables if they are chopped, mixed with egg, formed into croquettes, dip- ped into egg and bread crumbs, fried and served with brown sauce. Cold- boiled potatoes may be remodeled au gratin, creamed or used for salad, and the saucyful of baked beans that enough to serve again may be advan- tageously disposed of in the making of soup.

The cupful of cereal which is left over may be used for cream soup, with either half stock and half milk or all stock.

By a cultivation of simplicity in the home the expense would be cut down and the household work reduced. Rooms with half-curtained background and a few pieces of furniture of mod- est design and one or two pictures or rare pieces are the right sort of thing, say these promoters of frugality. And, for all the plainness of such surround- ings, they may be made very charming by a little planning or originality on the part of the housewife.

Labor saving devices in the home are recommended as one step toward thrift. By their use the number of hands employed about the house is reduced.

And even in the use of coal and gas the housewife is advised how to save a penny here or there. For instance, here is a valuable pointer in one of the "war economy" hints:

"Utensils used on a coal fire should not be used on a gas cooker, as a coat- ing of soot acts as a nonconductor and wastes heat." Here is another:

"Always get the oven thoroughly hot before beginning to cook and then re- duce the gas. Cook as much as possi- ble in the oven when it is once heated."

Four persons, two from Toronto, were badly hurt, and about twenty passengers sustained slight cuts and bruises, Tuesday afternoon, when the last four coaches of the C.P.R. east-bound express, leaving Toronto at noon, were derailed near Trenton, and turned turtle over a 25-foot embankment, rolling into a gravel pit.

Rev. Thos. Joplin, Field Secretary of the Shantymen's Christian Association, is in town for a few days in the interest of this Association. The work of this Association is to send Missionaries, with supplies of bibles and gospels for distribution, who hold meetings and engage in personal work for the eternal salvation of men in the lumber and mining camps, railway gangs, and lonely settlements, far removed from all religious influences.

The death occurred on Saturday afternoon of Mrs. Margaret Storms, widow of the late Ruggles S. Storms, Wilton, at the home of her son, Mordy G. Storms, 142 Collingwood street, Kingston. Deceased had been in failing health for some time. She was born at Wilton, and lived there practically all her life. She was in her seventy-eighth year. Deceased is survived by three sons, Mordy G. of Diatitian Work in connection with the Emergency Hospitals, by the Ser-

Her duty as inspector will require her to advise and assist the Diatitians at each hospital to organize their work in that branch of the service. Hospi-throughout the country from coast to in the organizing of the Bell Telephone exchanges in the city of Toronto, and that company has been most compli-

The Bell Co. could not refuse her re-her upon conclusion of her work, for

Have a Garden.

"A back yard garden will benefit the town man from a financial and physical point of view," said an active gardener. "Of course, the average town garden is not large enough to raise sufficient potatoes, but it is large enough to raise green vegetables through the summer in sufficient quantity to supply the table. By this I mean radishes, onions, lettuce, peas and like produce. In the course of a summer the average household spends a large sum with hucksters of green vegetables." "Some soils are so poor," he said, "that it would be difficult to raise a potato on them. Others are such poor farmers that they could not raise a potato on any soil. Whether one raises anything or not, the outdoor exercises will be beneficial to the health and the high cost of living can be cut down by cutting down the doctor's bill."

NATIONAL SERVICE LITERATURE.

One of the most valuable of recent literary contributions to the great cause is a booklet by Professor Stephen Leacock, entitled "National Organization for War." In this booklet Dr. Leacock makes an urgent call for national thrift and national saving.
He attacks in vigorous style the evils of extravagance at this crisis in Canada's history, and by trenchant phrase and apt illustration disposes of various common errors in regard to individual spending of money during war time. This pamphlet was originally published by Dr. Leacock himself, but the National Service Board were so convinced of its value in connection with their Thrift Campaign that they have had it republished and have undertaken its distribution. Copies may be obtained by writing to the Secretary of the National Service Board at Ottawa, or by applying to the National Service Director in any Province.

DEMOCRACY AT WORK

Among the most important events of our time aside from the supreme event of the World War is the discussion in a practical way throughout the rural districts of Western Canada of the National Platform recently adopted by the Canadian Council of Agriculture, after having been accepted by the organized farmers of the three Prairie Provinces. It is during these weeks being taken up for careful and detailed examination in every local branch throughout the West.

From the point of view of the Free Trader such an event is of supreme significance, while in a general way sentiment in the west has for some years been developing in opposition to the tariff there can be no doubt that such widespread and detailed discussion as is now being given to the question will result in greater definiteness of understanding and in fuller recognition of the burdens and injustices under which the people still labour.

From the point of view of Democracy such a situation is eminently encouraging. It is when the people begin to think and to learn and to know that they prepare themselves to be able also to act in regard to public affairs, and it is when the people after careful consideration, and with full knowledge, set themselves to act, that special privilege and other bearing monopoly begin to tremble. There can be no doubt that in future years the knowledge and the will of the people will demand a very much larger share in the shaping of public policies and in the control of the affairs generally, and when the people rule there is every reason to expect a lessening of injustice and an increasing of opportunity for the average man.

The Free Trade League of Canada organized to combat the tariff as one of the great evils still unsubdued, is continuing its propaganda and increasing its membership not only in the West but to some extent east of the Lakes as well. Full information regarding its work and prospects may be had by addressing the Secretary, 406 Chambers of Commerce, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

The Red Cross Society

We are pleased to state, that through the kindness of our many Red Cross workers, a check for $1000 has been sent this week to Headquarters, to help pay for the many needs of our soldiers overseas.

The pupils of Miss Etta Harrison's class, at the public school, have again collected $5.00 from "self-imposed fines," the treasurers this month being Alma Wales, Lillian Birchall, Everett Smith and James Fitzpatrick; and the Red Cross is most grateful for the money, which has been applied on the Belgian Relief Fund.

The Society is greatly indebted to Mrs. Mac McCarney, who brought to the hall on Saturday a most delicious fruit cake, which on being raffled brought in a handsome sum of money.
 Mrs. C. I. Maybee held the lucky ticket.

The following amounts are also thankfully acknowledged: Dr. Stewart
 Paul, $5.00; and Mrs. W. A. Stacey
 $5.00.

The hall will be open all day Saturday and tea will be served as usual during the afternoon.

Through the kindness of B. M.
 Black, of The Robinson Co., the Red Cross has a beautiful new sign for the Headquarters at the town hall.
